

Bb

A free African American, Benjamin Banneker was a surveyor, inventor, almanac author, naturalist and a farmer. With very little formal schooling, he taught himself math and astronomy. At the age of 22, he made the first striking clock. Banneker went on to survey and draw up the plans for Washington D.C.. He worked to fight against slavery and racial inequality by corresponding with Thomas Jefferson.